"For example, a few months ago, they started only distributing pensions from the new township. Those sorts of activities directly forced a number of older residents to move to the new township and they've been living there about six months and they still don't have any accomodations...they've been living in tents and very bad conditions."

Barry Dutoit, Grahamstown Rural Committee

(from phone conversation on February 12th with Seattle activists, describing the current situation in Cathcart.)

At 9:00 p.m., Seattle anti-apartheid activists will call residents of Cathcart at the Daliwe (Old Township) Advice Center, a resource center set up by the community to resist the forced relocation of Daliwe residents to a new township, Katikati. Please join us.
