

ANTI-APARTHEID ART

Protest Posters from South Africa

These protest posters can be seen in community centers, union halls, churches, and on public buildings from Cape Town to Johannesburg — and now they can be seen in your living room as well. By special arrangement with the Poster Project, a non-profit fundraising organization, these striking red, yellow and black prints are now on sale in the United States.

No anti-apartheid activist should be without these posters, especially since all proceeds from poster sales will be donated directly to liberation groups in South Africa. As the freedom struggle continues, funds are desperately needed — for the legal defense of political prisoners, to support emerging black trade unions, to finance the anti-apartheid groups which are under constant attack by the white minority regime.
