“We believe the success of Afro-Americans is bound up with the emancipation of all African peoples and also other dependent peoples and laboring classes everywhere...”

-- Declaration of the 5th Pan-African Congress, 1945

TransAfrica Forum is one of the nation’s foremost research, education, and advocacy centers dedicated to global justice for the African World. A center for activism focusing on conditions in Africa, the Caribbean, and Latin America, TransAfrica organizes seminars, public education campaigns, and collaborative advocacy initiatives to help promote more humane and just U.S. policies.

Under the banner, “Justice for the African World,” TransAfrica Forum is charting new directions, addressing emerging priorities, building strategic alliances and spearheading cooperative opportunities around the issues facing the African World and the broader global justice movement.

Key Programs and Initiatives

Arthur R. Ashe, Jr. Foreign Policy Library Seminars and Public Forums: From the African World Visions Film Series to lectures, regional forums and educational events, the Arthur R. Ashe, Jr. Foreign Policy Library provides opportunities for greater awareness of the forces shaping the African World today.

Scholars’ Council: Through policy briefs, position papers, and roundtable discussions, the Scholars’ Council articulates critical African World perspectives on health, education, labor, women, economics and sustainable development.

Southern African Trade Union Leadership Academy (SATULA): This regional academy promotes labor education and leadership development for the various federations which are components of the Southern African Trade Union Coordinating Committee (SATUCC). TransAfrica Forum’s role is to serve as the facilitator and coordinator of the project, working in tandem with SATUCC, to support the struggle against global injustice.

Foreign Policy Conference: Annually TransAfrica Forum’s Foreign Policy Conference provides a venue for alternative voices in the foreign policy arena, particularly engaging U.S. activists of color and leaders from Africa and the Diaspora.

Globalization Monitor: The Globalization Monitor is an authoritative publication of analysis on international financial institutions, multi-national corporations and their impact on the African World.

TransAfrica Student Conference: Recognizing the importance of activism among young people, TransAfrica Forum has launched a student/youth initiative to further the development of progressive Black/African student activists and organizations and to advance activism on issues facing the African World.
